and a small tool shed and storehouse was put by the pool for park equipment.

Part of the cost for pool supervision was paid for by the Club at a cost of approximately $200. The cost of a one month's supervision course at Red Deer for one boy and girl was paid for by the Club at a cost of $47.50 each.

September: A new kids' outdoor skating rink was planned in park area by the Recreation Board. Rotary members surveyed the ground and put in grade stakes. Mainline Co. donated graded this down with club members helping to give grade levels until complete. Some used shower-room fixtures were bought by the Club for this project at a cost of $86.50.

October: A fund raising scheme was put on and some 30 Turkey Cakes were put on sale with ticket prices ranging from .014 to $1.00 with a turkey as the prize for lucky numbers. With the money raised, we gave out 10 Christmas hampers at a cost of approximately $40.00 each.

December: A donation of $50.00 to each family was given to 5 families who had lost their all by fire. Hospital tree decorations were bought again this year. During December a Christmas party was held for Rotary members and families with a Santa Clause and a gift for each child. 30 couples and around 50 children attended.

At a meeting of Jan. 6, 1960 it was voted that we sponsor and equip a boys' hockey team. More equipment, tree planting and other things were planned for the summer of 1960.

Park clean up work parties continued whenever weather permitted. Playground equipment was repaired, 100' pool painted, 90 trees were planted at a cost of approximately $100.00. 40 yards of loam was hauled in. Mowing grass, hoeing weeds, watering, cleaning of the pool and many other items of park maintenance kept Rotarians busy during the early part of the year.

And it was not all Rotarians who entered into this effort. The Rotarians are ever grateful to the many friends of Rotary who gave their time so freely to help provide playground facilities in Drayton Valley.

YOUR FIRE DEPARTMENT

This week your fire department would like to bring your attention to that inevitable pile that slowly rises in front of all homes: a pile of old clothes, a few half full paint cans not necessarily containing paint, or some nails, or heaven knows what.

These little piles grow from small repair projects around the house, and no matter how careful the housekeeper as they seem to spring up in an unending series and are almost impossible to get rid of. But for the sake of keeping the fire hazard in your home at a minimum they must be got rid of. When left to sit and grow they form possibly the greatest menace you have in your home, and the cause of more small fires than any other factor.

We urge you to clean out these piles often, and especially to watch for open paint and cleaning fluid cans, gasoline, wet greasy rags or old clothes, and anything else that might ignite by spontaneous combustion. It's only good housekeeping to get rid of them, and much much safer.

Recent visits with Mr. and Mrs. Ken Boling. Mr. Stichter is manager for Bell Telephone at Camp Pendleton, the huge Marine base near Oceanside.

Twenty-nine years ago the Stichters were participants in a double wedding ceremony with the Bolings. Eintrachtler is four months older than Dennis Boling. If you wish to pursue the subject further you take it on from there.

Alex Korotuk ran an ad for a lost transistor in the P.N.A. recently. A newcomer to Drayton Valley Mr. Korotuk didn't hold forth too much hope of ever seeing his ninety dollar transistor radio again. However, he had not reckoned with the undisputed power of the press as represented by the P.N.A.

Within an hour of the time the P.N.A. hit the streets via its very efficient newboys, Mr. Korotuk had his radio returned to him. Some of the reports we have received of response to ads in the P.N.A. have been truly fantastic. One man, away out west of Rocky Rapids advertised a stove for sale several months ago. Within a day or so of the time the ad appeared he could have sold not just the one stove, but several had he had them.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Last Saturday night we had a small fire; however, judging from the number of cars that were milling around in front of the fire engine I'm sure everyone was there so I won't describe it.

Fortunately it was a small fire which was under control by the time we finally got there. It served to pull out a couple of rather important matters which could be brought up.

The first thing is how to report a fire---there's not much to it but it is small that it be done right if your fire department is to get there quickly as possible. Just tell the operator you want to report a fire and she will connect you to the right party. Then give your name, the name of the occupant of the home in question in a case where you are calling for someone, the exact or type of fire, and most important, give a good, concise description of the location. We must have all that information if we are to respond quickly and efficiently. Incidentally, I received one of those "Fingerlip Selectors" in the mail this week you will notice that it gives a number to call in case of fire which is wrong and we ask that you report it out.

The second point is this: When that siren goes, volunteer firemen come speeding from all parts of the town to the fire hall and thence to the fire. If their route is impeded by road hogs, slow moving traffic, or just curious bystanders, vital time is lost, and accidents can occur. Please, we ask you to make way for these men, and for the fire truck. Remember, it could be your home and your family that's burning up, and the first minutes of a fire are the ones that count the most.

SCIENCE IN YOUR LIFE

Sore Throat Solved

Behold! A. E. Housman once wrote that his poetry "sprang chiefly from physical causes, such as a relaxed sore throat." Few of us could rival Housman's literary style, but a warning sore throat often evokes in us at least a petty sigh of relief.

Your sore throat may show up as one of the most annoying symptoms of the common cold. It can also be a separate infection caused by a variety of viruses.

Although the common cold is a relatively innocuous virus, it remains intractable, science forbids. Remedies against throat infections, treating the "sore" throat. These new sell antibiotics in the form of candy-like lozenges. These orange-flavored Candettes attack invading microbes and ease throat pain. Saline gargles are helpful in washing out by-products of throat infection.

Because respiratory infections are spread by coughing and sneezing, many attempts have been made to keep germs from floating in the air. Ultraviolet light and medicated vapor sprays have been used.

Still, respiratory diseases, including sore throat and the common cold, cost the U.S. a staggering two billion dollars annually. Other estimates place the toll as high as five billion. A recent study of illness among employees of a major petroleum company revealed that respiratory ailments account for over half of the absences.

Although sore throat may herald only a common cold, medical specialists think it may also tip off the onset of a more serious disease. If symptoms last on or keep coming back, you should consult your doctor.

Laboratory Earth

The ancient Greeks pictured the earth as a flat disc floating on the surface of a world ocean.

Today, almost any schoolboy can describe the earth's true shape, its dimensions and its major land and sea masses.

He can probably tell you something about the other planets in our solar system, too, and about stars and galaxies.

The naive conjectures of antiquity have been displaced by a body of precise knowledge based on scientific observation, experiment, and experiment. But much is still to be learned about our physical world.

More than three million square miles of Antarctica remain unexplored. The ocean depths still hold many mysteries. Weather and climate are not fully understood.

Scientists believe that many of the blank pages in our terrestrial book of knowledge will be filled during the forthcoming International Geophysical Year.

Since the earth itself is the laboratory of the geophysicist, nature's routine must be observed on a global scale.

Beginning in July, 1967, scientists of 30 countries will co-operate in a major effort to answer many of the unsolved questions in our physical universe. They also hope that the common effort on which all nations can agree. The planet Earth is after all, the one place that all people can claim as "home."

BASE BALL NEWS

On September 6 the Drayton Valley Colts gave a good accounting of their baseball skill decisively beating the Evansburg team at Evansburg with a score of 8-1. The Drayton Valley Pony League then took on the Wilfred Ponies and beat them 8-5. The win brought the D.V. Ponies up against the D.V. Colts for a hard fought game which, however, the Colts won quite handily to become the winners of Tournament First Prize of forty dollars. The Pony League won Second prize of twenty-five dollars.

The Drayton Valley Little League also won over their opponents in an exhibition game, beating Evansburg with a score of 6-0.

Now that the baseball season is over the Drayton Valley Athletic Association would like to have all the uniforms turned in to the coaches as soon as possible.

The Athletic Association extend their thanks to all those who helped in so many ways to make the 1960 season the huge success it was.

The Chapel Hour

Dividends for Non-Drinkers

taken from Good Business.

Today's trend to clinch every business deal over a drink has grown to such proportions that many businessmen and women find themselves weary of a merry go round they never meant to get on. They find the momentum of the "wet deal" has propelled them along until they suffer reverses not only in health, finances, and personal relationships, but in business as well.

"Intemperance is one of the great and growing causes of failure in the United States today. Everywhere you go you'll find business and professional men drinking far more than they should," observes Kenneth McFarland, educational consultant and for General Motors Corporation.

At a recent business cocktail party McFarland heard a wife admonishing her obviously intoxicated husband not to drink any more.

"That's my business!" he snapped at her, to which she replied, "Yes, and in becoming your only business."

The belief that friendly drinking-incess business success has invaded many fields to such an extent that drinking is considered an occupational hazard.

Before Frank Faber opened his own Minneapolis advertising agency, Minneapolis, knowing him to be an abstemious, discouraged him. "You can't last six months in advertising on a no-drinking basis," they told him. Faber went ahead anyway, and in six years had to move his booming business to its own building.

"We lost some accounts because of the policy," he says. "But I gained many more accounts than I lost."

In sales work, liquor is considered practically indispensable, yet outstanding success stories come from many non-drinkers.

"Being actively engaged in the insurance field for many years, I have had people tell me they wouldn't have discussed their financial problems had other confidential matters with me had I not stopped drinking," says Charles H. Schwab of Chicago.

"Many of these people knew me when I was drinking, and since I stopped drinking, I have been able to do business on a basis that otherwise would not have been possible."

Having observed the situation from the drinker's and the non-drinker's point of view, Schwab adds, "I can honestly say that any one who thinks he is missing out on any social activity, or losing business by not drinking, is absolutely mistaken. I have proved the opposite to be the case."

Businessmen who find themselves involved in more "wet deals" than the bargained-for experience an inevitable decline of spiritual values says Vincent Tracy, who was a successful Fifth Avenue business executive at thirty and a Bowery bum at thirty-five.

"Spiritual values are utilitarian, he says. "I used to mumble over that word spiritual. Now I know it is the only real value in life. Inner tranquillity comes not with a pill, an injection, or a bottle. You get it when you think more of others than you do of yourself. Many times you feel you have more headaches and have received heavier blows than anyone else. This kind of self-contempt leads to lead a person to drink."

Tracy now operates "Tracy Farms," a rehabilitation centre for men in New York State. He admits he thought he could handle social drinking in his own career, but soon found it had him "baffled."

"When I started drinking, I put a alcohol on the board of directors of my life. It was not long before I found the other directors and took over. He made promises to me that he did not and could not perform. He did not help me eliminate or solve any of my problems, but stripped me of everything I owned and then left me. I am paying the price yet."

The real reason for drinking is generally unexamined. It is one who depends on the glass to his hand, according to Judge Walter H. Beckham of Miami. "Most persons drink because they have an interior complex that is why they insist on your drinking with them. In reality, however, they respect you more because you have greater will power."

As John Lalonde drank more and more heavily, his thriving pharmacy business deteriorated and his family life suffered, until in desperation he tried suicide - not once, but twice. Surviving, he prayed to God to help him in his misery.

"From that day to this, I have been a sober man," he relates. "The very desire and craving for liquor has been taken away. The power of God can come into a man's life and transform him from a good-for-nothing drunkard into a sober, industrious, and God-fearing man."

But how do you say no when everyone else is drinking? Suppose you do want to go on the wagon, and you feel that your life will be better for it - how do you do it?

The extra "spiritual asmir" which Alcoholics Anonymous now found to be necessary has helped countless individuals. It has also been adopted by Du Pont Standard Oil, Consolidated Edison, and other business organizations dealing with drinking problems.

Truly Nolan of Miami was considered a hopeless alcoholic. He said: "In my helplessness I got down on my knees and prayed to God for help. That was thirty-five years ago, and I've never taken a drink since."

In his prosperous examining business Nolan now hires only non-drinkers, believing that business and drinking do not mix. A bartender, Lawrence Weld, an add-oner, agrees with him: "In such cases as mine, in which I Continued on Page 13, Col. 1

FOSTER PARENT PLAN

It happened recently to J. M. Wynn, prominent Montreal chartered accountant, and, according to him, the experience was a deeply moving one indeed.

Back in 1949, Mr. Wynn joined the hundreds of Canadians who have become foster parents of impoverished children overseas, by contributing $15. A month toward a child's support through Foster Parents' Plan.

On joining Plan Mr. Wynn received the photo and case history of 6-year-old Theodore Dimeaux. His father and uncle had been killed in the war and Theodore's mother was too ill to provide proper shelter and nourishment for his little family. Now, eleven years later, Mr. Wynn has visited Greece and had the pleasure of actually meeting "his child."

"It is a gratifying experience," he says. "To learn how much they can do with a few dollars and the clothing and medicine Plan provides."

Theodore now attends a trade school and is learning to become an electrician. The family have been able to purchase furniture, mattresses, kitchen utensils, an ice-box and so on, all through the help received.

"You can only visualize the hardships by an actual visit. I had already had this experience in Italy 4 years ago, when I saw my Italian foster child. However, the fact that children write their foster parents monthly helps greatly to understand their living conditions."

Foster Parents' Plan is a non-profit, non-sectarian relief organization. The Canadian address is P.O. Box 65, Station "B", Montreal, Quebec.

STRACHAN-PARE WEDDING

Banners of gladness beamed the altar of the Rimbey United Church, August 13th for the wedding of Miss Mary Jean Strachan to Mr. Paulick J. Pare, oldest son of Mr. & Mrs. Edmund Pare of Drayton Valley. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Rev. W.D. Race.

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose a floor length gown of net over white satin. Her veil of white net was held in place by a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a nosegay of red roses buds and streamers over a white Bible.

Attending the bride were Cecile Plamondon, Fay Strachan, Evelyn Wagner and Dorothy Brown. They chose blue-satin-formal with matching head-pieces and carried bouquets of white and pink gladioli.

Attending the groom were Mr. John Navasnick, Clifford Hester, Albert Irwin, and Jerry McNally-chuk.

A reception for 60 guests was held in the Legion Hall where Mr. Richard Maddock, a friend of the bride, proposed the toast. The bride and groom received a long distance telephone call from the brides Aunt and Uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Cummings.

The Mother of the bride chose a green sheath with white accessories and chose a nosegay of white and pink carnations.

The groom's Mother chose a two piece beige sheath. A nosegay of pink and white carnations accompanied her white accessories.

A dance followed with music supplied by Spun Mouldie and the Merry Matrons. For a going away outfit the bride chose a brown and white sheath and matching duster with white accessories.

The happy couple are residing in Olds, where the groom is employed at Bowden by Hi-Tower Drilling.

Out of town guests were from Calgary, Intelfall, Legal, Edson Olds and Rocky Mountain House, and the groom's friends from Drayton Valley—Al, Bel, and Joyce Swaine, Mr. & Mrs. St. Louis, Miss G. St. Louis, Mrs. D. Carter.

Walking through a field with his girl, Frank saw a bull charging toward them. He grabbed his girl and beat a hasty retreat. "Why, Frank dear," she said when they reached safety, "I thought you told me you'd face death for me."

"I would," he replied, "but that bull wasn't dead."

Neah's three sons were Elmer, Ham and Joseph.

Johnny Handiebar never underestimates an enemy. He can ride with the best, but he knows that survival depends more on brains than on skill. He lives by a code of thirteen rules, and in next week's edition he will tell you how to "Ride for Your Life" with the "Lucky Thirteen".

Looking at Recreation

by: Michael Gormley
Recreation Director

A VARIED PROGRAM: A varied and well-balanced recreation program for the fall and winter months seems to be well under way here in Drayton Valley. Most of the planned activity seems to be centered in the athletic sphere, however, there are unsatisfied interests in arts and crafts, dancing, music and several miscellaneous activities. This program will not meet with every recreational need of each and every person in the community, however, it is hoped that a vast majority will be satisfied recreationally during the indoor season. Every activity presently planned may not meet with the desired success, however, if the overall program is to be successful a very high percentage of those functions will have to meet desired standards. Some of the activities are under way and are solidly established while many are still in a planning stage. Time will tell just how successful the program will be but however, in the meantime I will do all in my power to keep everyone smiling.

BADMINTON: I closed out my column on this note last week and I think that we have something here that can be developed to some measure of success. From the interest survey and from what I have learned from different people around town, I believe that interest would be very keen in the badminton field here in Drayton Valley. Presently I have several names of individuals interested in the badminton game and as soon as a sufficient number can be obtained I hope to call a meeting of all interested persons for the purpose of forming a badminton club. This club will be formed within the Drayton Valley Athletic Association and will be wholly responsible for the same. When I first planned to organize badminton I thought of it more in the way of an adult activity, however, I find that interest is quite keen among the younger folks also. In this case, I would like to include the same in the program, if it would not interfere with any similar school activity. Badminton is a sport that is universally enjoyed by people of all ages, and from every walk of life. It is equally popular among men and women, boys and girls and is a very fine conditioner, an ideal activity for anyone who wants to keep fit and trim. It is a form of recreation that I would like very much to see solidly established in this fair town especially among our adult population. So if you are interested in rackets and shuttlecocks, I think that you will have a chance to pursue your interest in the near future.

BOWLING: The long and busy bowling season got off to a flying start last Tuesday evening. The local alleys at Valley Bowling Ltd. will be kept very busy from now until near April or May. I understand that there are some very fine bowlers in the "Valley" and we can expect to see many the plus spots, many strikes registered and some very fine averages compiled with in the next six or seven months.

We are thinking very strongly about organizing a School League this year. Interest among the youngsters seems to be very keen and I do not see any reason why such a plan can't be realized with a minimum of work and difficulty. The alleys would be available for the high-schoolers every evening from 4:00 until 6:00 p.m. and all day Saturday. Those young people would also be eligible to take part in Provincial Tournaments which it always something to feel furnish that initial spark of initiative and encouragement. The youngsters would work well under way and in a few days we will know whether the young men decide to form a league or not. Personally, I sure hope they take the step. They will be a great credit to bowling and without a doubt are capable of bringing the town fame in outside competition when they get their chance to upset pins in a Provincial Tournament.

VOLEYBALL: It seems that the third time was the charm here in realm of volleyball. The response was not good during the last summer, however, since scholastic endeavors have been resumed interest seems to have caught fire. I understand that a sizable number of girls from both the high and the elementary schools are very keen on getting the sport rolling and I hope to be able to organize a league or leagues, as the case may be, within the very near future. A generous amount of organizational work in this sphere of recreation has been delegated into the very capable hands of Shirley Stehen, who is doing a very fine job.

four teams and if interest increases we may expand to five or six teams. Under the present setup, we will field two football teams and two basketball teams. Equipment and uniforms will be the only delay now, and in ten days or less we should have our young stars out on the gridiron glowing in all they have. The teams will be named shortly and a schedule will be drawn up. All games will be played on weekends.

The man mainly responsible for this smashing success in the promotion of "Autumn Madness" is Harold Townsend former line star with Queen's University. Harold recruited players, coaches, financial aid and has done an incomparable job of leadership in this field. Next week I will have a complete list of players, coaches and executive and further explain their way around the squared circle while there are also five or six promising rookies.

WHAT ABOUT A TOWN BAND: One thing in which I am interested and, if I remain here in Drayton Valley as Recreation Director, I plan to organize is a town band. I think that a town such as this should have a band. A town band can create a certain community pride and loyalty which is incomparable. During my recreation course, one of my projects was the theoretical organization of a band from which I benefited very much. If interest is equal to my expectations in the realm of band music -- well, I certainly would like to see it on my lock.

Letter To the Editor:-

The Femina News Advertiser is a great means for the citizens of Drayton Valley to get to know the different personalities who make up the business and progressive side of the community. It is to the best interest of each citizen to know a bit about those people who do so much for the welfare of this town.

It is with much appreciation that each week we read concerning the "Drifter Personalities". Would it be asking too much of the editor that in the near future could be possibly put in such personalities such as the wonderful doctors we are so fortunate to have here in our town; also the nurses and staff of the hospital; and the pharmacists of the drug stores. Now that the opening of another term of school is just around the corner, it would be quite appropriate to add such personalities as the principals and teachers of our schools. These men and women add so much to the growth and education of our community. Thank-you very much

THE HAPLE HOUR
 many musicians must co-operate I could not afford to have one drinker out of the effort of the others."

"If the businessman sincerely feels he would be better off as a non-drinker, he should take his stand and stick to it despite pressure on him to conform. One salesman who found the pressure heavy when his non-drinking policy made him a standout at a staff get-together on a new job, says: 'My refusal to join in just one social drink nearly caused a fight, but others present quickly quelled the senior salesman who was drunk. Four years later I was appointed sales manager of the company.'"

Referring to such social pressure to go along with the crowd, Senator Richard Neuberger says: "I am never called upon to explain why I don't eat oysters or cats live or swim like I. I don't have to give an account of why I don't hunt or fish or play polo. But whenever I turn down a martini or a whiskey sour, the host is likely to ask sympathetically, 'Disappointed?' And if I shake my head and say, 'Never use the stuff,' explanations are persistently demanded."

The Senator refuses to give any, considering it his right not to drink if he so chooses, without explaining to anyone.

Everyone told R.W. Bayles he would have to drink on his job if he hoped to advance, pointing out that his predecessor was a drinking man.

"Experience proved that drinking by competitors never had the power to take business away from my company," says Bayles. "Several customers, including the most important ones in the area advised me frequently that they were giving my company their business because I did not drink. Like this sales executive, others are finding it is quite possible to take a non-drinking stand without harmful consequences. Clarence Mercell of Boston has found this to be true.

He says, "Although I'm engaged in a business required to require social drink, I've yet to find any evidence that it's necessary for me to relax my standards in order to gain business or social acceptance."

Mercell believes it is up to the non-drinker to bring ease and friendliness to any gathering and to disprove the assertion that drink are needed to "relax." Because of the wide use of liquor for this purpose, "hangover cures" have become a fifty-million-dollar-a-year business in the United States.

"For centuries man has relied upon alcohol to resolve this difficulties and shortcomings," notes Dr. Theobald Van Dellen. "In its role as a relaxing agent, the drug has become to escape mechanism, and more problems are created than existed originally. It is the wise man who learns how to relax without resorting to mania."

The cocktail party "fun" is important as it used to be," says Allen Lefferding, young Colorado executive: "I have observed a trend away from the feeling that drink are essential in connection with business contacts. In fact it is the greatest asset to an abstainer. People know you won't be under the influence, and they can trust your judgment and decisions."

There is also a widespread belief that a few drinks lay up a businessman to do a better job. However, recent tests made with the co-operation of typists, watchmakers, dentists, surgeons, and operators of delicate machinery showed that even the small amount of alcohol in one or two beers lowered efficiency.

In answer to the claim that personality gains from drinking makes for increased business, someone has said, "For every deal made over a drink, there are two deals lost." Many can testify about the sorrow that this is all too true.

Recent Standard Oil Company statistics estimate 346,000,000 man-hours lost to industry each year, at a cost of at least $794,000,000. Hidden costs include inefficiency on the job, increased accident risk, sickness and general lack of well-being, as well as family and financial troubles.

"It is staggering to review the costs of alcoholism in industry on a national scale," remarks a Colorado news editorial. "It is just staggering to take a look at the costs of the bottle boom in our individual communities, cities, and companies." Many businessmen, aware of the situation, have had to make their own adjustments and are awakening to the need to support group and individuals working for better alcohol education generally.

Paradoxically, as more people drink, more are saying no to drinking. Jerry Geisler, famed attorney, is one of these persons.

"I used to drink to excess in my younger days," he says. "One morning after a wild week and I started thinking about what drink had done and was doing to me, and what it had done to my career, and I knew I would never touch it again. I haven't since."

Stress came to Geisler after this decision, but to the point where physical illness before going to the courtroom, he disciplined himself to become one of the most eloquent of lawyers.

"Discipline helps us establish a pattern," a Royal Bank of Canada monthly letter stated recently.

"Deep in us dwells chaos. Self-discipline means we do not let our emotions run our lives and dilute, but according to principles of right and wrong."

Women as well as men find they must make a decision about drinking. Author-actress Dale Brass emphasizes the loss of spiritual values to the person caught up in the habit.

"A social drink seems innocent enough, but finally one feels that in order to be sociable he must take several. Liquor dims the memory of moral values; it clouds the shrine of the soul, while it pays homage to the flesh."

The deeply spiritual side of this modern-day vice is evidenced in the personal experiences of many persons. Railroaded Frank Bates drew himself out of his job, his home, and his town. At the end of his rope, he prayed in desperation. "To my surprise, the Lord made me sober," he later recounted, and with sobriety came long years of service and happy home life.

Prominent Americans in all walks of life find a decisive "No" does not militate against either social or business success. Abner James Farley is noted for his legion of friends, his gentleness, and his spectacular ability to remember thousands of names. Ezra Taft Benson says

"Knowing the infinite joy and peace of mind which results from never having taken a drink of liquor, I can sincerely commend such a course to all. It pays overabundant dividends to live the good life!"

The decision not to drink is influencing to day by the issue of drinking and driving. The businessman who drinks often has to get behind the wheel to continue his work or to reach home. But he cannot do this with a clear conscience if he is aware of the appalling increase in highway tragedies at least half of which are alcohol-caused. One authority says: "The social drinker is the real highway menace. He likes to speed, to show off, while the driver who is just plain drunk is a little slower."

This and similar facts referring to health and behavior in relation to drinking are part of the fresh data constantly being amassed and given out to the public by the many scientists making studies of alcoholism.

There is general agreement today on the need for vastly increased alcohol education if delinquency and crime are to be checked. grim highway statistics attest, and a disproportionate economic burden, placed there by liquor and its effects, removed from society. The fact about alcoholism, are urgently needed to counterbalance especially for youth, the unrealistic, "glamorous" advertising on which liquor interests are spending many millions of dollars annually.

"At this stage of our history most people are reluctant to look very hard at the one necessary causal factor—access to alcohol," observes Dr. J. Ferguson of Ontario's Alcoholism Research Foundation. "It seems that most of us don't want to abolish the problem of alcoholism at its root. We would rather live with it, particularly when for most of us it is somebody else's problem."

Says France's well-known Dr. Paul Perrin: "We observe in habitual drinkers a liberation of the spiritual instinct and a decline of moral value accompanied paradoxically by self-satisfaction. That such a mentality has become widespread, to the point of obtaining approbation, represents for our civilization, I give meance."

He is echoed by a Christian minister who says: "I have never yet seen or heard a single individual who became addicted to the use of alcohol, in however slight degree, who did not suffer immediately and sadly in his spiritual life and interest. No person can use alcohol, even in the mildest form, and retain a keen-edged spiritual purpose and a warm, responsive spiritual interest."

Many a thinking businessman today concludes: "What price success, attained via the road of wet deals, if I am after all, the lesser—in vital and precious spiritual values that do not show up on my account books?"
